THE HERBER
ARKHAM-O-PEDIA
VERSION 1.1

An Index of Arkham People, Places, and Other Weirdness in “Lovecraft Country” RPG Writings

Based on Writings by Keith Herber, Lynn Willis, Richard Watts, Mark Morrison & Erik Herber. Compiled by Dean Engelhardt
Dedication

The Arkham-O-Pedia is respectfully dedicated to Keith "Doc" Herber who architected the Chaosium vision of Arkham as a game setting. Along with Lynn Willis and Kevin Ross, he was responsible for crafting the "shape" of Chaosium's Call of Cthulhu product line back in the early 1990s. Keith's untimely death in 2009 robbed the world of a great visionary and game writer. We hope that this humble resource will help draw attention to the excellent depth of Keith's original designs and allow other writers to more easily "play" in the sandbox that he created in Arkham Unveiled (1990).

CLEAR CREDIT

The Herber Arkham-O-Pedia was compiled in 2018 by Dean Engelhardt based on material that was published by Chaosium in a range of books: Arkham Unveiled, H.P. Lovecraft's Arkham, Fifth Edition Keeper's Kit, and Tales of the Miskatonic Valley. All of those books are copyright by their respective authors. This volume contains no material sourced verbatim from those prior works, but rather compiles indices and reference lists that enhances the accessibility of the original material.

For this material to be useful, you will need to own at least one of the Chaosium books mentioned above. Several of these books are (at the time of writing) out of print in physical form although most are available as PDFs.

The text of this reference work is copyright © 2018 by Dean Engelhardt.

Cover illustration is a montage based on photographs which are either in the public domain or were previously copyrighted but whose copyright has now expired.

The Herber Arkham-O-Pedia Logo was created by Dean Engelhardt.

The town of Arkham was created by H.P. Lovecraft.

INTRODUCTION

The witch-haunted college town of Arkham was first described by H.P. Lovecraft in numerous horror stories written between 1920 and 1935. As an aid to using this evocative setting in tabletop roleplaying games, Chaosium Inc. have published sourcebooks describing Arkham as an enormous “sandbox” of people and places. This material appeared first under the title Arkham Unveiled (CHA2325, published 1990), and later as a revised edition (“H.P. Lovecraft’s Arkham”, CHA8803 published 2003).

The Chaosium characterisation of Arkham was primarily written by Keith “Doc” Herber in 1990. It represents perhaps the most detailed elaboration of Lovecraft’s original vision of the town to receive publication. The game setting was created with the specific goal of supporting investigative roleplaying games which make use of Chaosium’s Call of Cthulhu system, although some material invented for Herber’s version of Arkham has since infused its way into other games and stories as well.

While the intention of Herber and his collaborators was to map out a detailed setting upon which subsequent books and scenarios could build, such elaboration for the most part didn’t really happen. There have certainly been many Arkham-based scenarios published since that time, but most have not richly drawn upon the detailed and internally-consistent material written by Herber. Instead most scenario writers have picked a few isolated NPCs or locations and used them as a springboard for their own invention — frequently running counter to the foundation set out in the original sourcebooks.

So why has the excellent world-building work undertaken by Herber (and similarly by Kevin Ross for other Lovecraft Country locations) never been significantly built upon by others? We can hypothesize two explanations, either or both of which may be partially responsible. Firstly, it is true that Chaosium have not always been vigilant with keeping the Lovecraft Country sourcebooks in print. There have been periods when new gamers coming to Call of Cthulhu could not obtain the sourcebooks for love nor money. A second explanation might be the complexity and intricacy of the detailed depiction made by Herber of Arkham and its many local inhabitants and institutions. There is a densely-packed wealth of detail buried in the original sourcebooks, and only a very limited amount of indexing to assist gamers (and game writers) to quickly track down specific half-remembered references. Understanding enough to slot a new piece into the elaborate masterpiece painted by Herber requires reading and understanding several loosely-related parts of the sourcebook (and then hoping that you’ve tracked down all the relevant details). This is hard work.

This PDF aims to provide the reader with some resources that will (hopefully) make it easier to navigate Herber’s depiction of Arkham. If you are a gamer, it might help you by quickly pointing you to a much-needed source of information (“quick, where can we go to buy some after-hours taxidermy supplies?”). But the goal of this Arkham-O-Pedia is more squarely to empower game writers with the tools that will make it easier to extrapolate and extend the Arkham sourcebook details to create new content that works harmoniously alongside Herber’s original details.

Different Editions and Sources

There are numerous (and diverse) depictions of Arkham in Chaosium’s Call of Cthulhu publications: the aim of this reference work is not to try to cover every one of these, but rather to focus on the original vision of Keith Herber. Readers who are interested in exploring the depth of different authors’ renditions of Arkham should obtain a copy of Issue #1 of Sentinel Hill Press’ excellent game periodical The Arkham Gazette which includes an extensive survey of all game scenarios set in and around Arkham.

Even limiting scope to just Herber’s vision of Arkham still leaves some complexity, since the original source material has been repackaged and reprinted a number of times.
The publication history is as follows:

* Arkham Unveiled (1990): this is the original edition written and overseen by Keith Herber.

* H.P. Lovecraft’s Arkham (2003): a revised edition with new maps, some textual overhaul, and dual stats for Call of Cthulhu and d20 Cthulhu.

In addition to the primary Arkham material contained in the sourcebook itself, there are some aspects of Herber’s depiction of Arkham that appear in other places. The Arkham-O-Pedia assumes the following other sources are consistent with the “canonical” intentions of Herber, either because they were written (or co-written) by him and published in other books, or because they were written by other authors and edited by Keith:

* The scenario “The Hills Rise Wild” (written by Mark Morrison & Lynn Willis; published in Arkham Unveiled, edited by Herber, and then also in H.P. Lovecraft’s Arkham).

* The scenario “The Comndemned” (written by Herber; published in Arkham Unveiled and then also in H.P. Lovecraft’s Arkham).

* The scenario “Dead of Night” (written by Herber; published in Arkham Unveiled and then also in H.P. Lovecraft’s Arkham).

* The scenario “Trail of Yig” (written by Erik Herber & Keith Herber; published in Tales of The Miskatonic Valley).

* The multi-page newspaper prop that came bundled with Arkham Unveiled and later reprints.

Layout of the Arkham-O-Pedia

The main body of this reference work comprises five indices, each of which collates information about a different aspect of the township of Arkham, its inhabitants and local businesses, or its immediate surrounds. The five indices are:

1. A sorted index of all PEOPLE mentioned somewhere in the sourcebook or associated extra scenarios;
2. A sorted index of ARKHAM BUSINESSES, FACILITIES, AND ORGANISATIONS;
3. A sorted index of all SITES SURROUNDING ARKHAM;
4. An index of all ARKHAM STREET ADDRESSES mentioned;
5. An index of all ARKHAM TELEPHONE NUMBERS mentioned.

Because there are some complexities associated with Arkham’s specific system or naming streets and assigning street numbers to locations, we have also included an appendix which provides an extended list of Arkham streets and the numbering scheme that applies to each one.

Precisely referring to content in the different book publications (and tear-out newspaper props) is challenging. To cater to the multiple locations where similar or identical material can be found in different publications, we include three different types of references. These are Sourcebook Entries, Scenario Codes, and Clipping Identifiers.
Sourcebook Entries

The heart of the depiction of Arkham in both Arkham Unveiled (hereafter abbreviated AU) and H.P. Lovecraft’s Arkham (HPLA) is the sourcebook. This lengthy section portrays each of the nine primary neighborhoods of 1920s Arkham and provides for each details of the businesses and people who may be found there.

Entries in the sourcebook are given a numeric code: for the nine Arkham neighborhoods this is a three-digit code (the first digit denoting the neighborhood, the remaining digits serving as a unique identifier among the locations in the neighborhood). Locations which are on the “Outskirts” of Arkham are given a four-digit code which works similarly.

While the existence of a numerical code identifying each main Arkham location in theory allows for easy identification of specific places, the republication of the material has complicated this significantly. During the revision of text for H.P. Lovecraft’s Arkham, the numbering system for each of the nine neighborhoods has been reallocated: the set of entries is the same, but the numeric identifiers have been re-allocated.

The box nearby shows the relationship between sourcebook numerical codes in the two books. Note that four-digit “Outskirts” codes are unchanged between editions.

When referring to a sourcebook entry by numeric code it is important to note whether the code relates the AU or HPLA numbering scheme. For the Arkham-O-Pedia we have elected to always include both, in the format “AUxxx = HPLAyyy”. In this notation, The numbers xxx indicate the numbering that the location receives in Arkham Unveiled, while yyy indicated the numbering that the location receives in H.P. Lovecraft's Arkham.

So, for example, the notation AU455=HPLA449 (F&M Trains and Toys) indicates that the entry describing the toyshop may be found in Arkham Unveiled as location 455, while in H.P. Lovecraft’s Arkham the same information would be available as entry 449.
Scenario Codes

Where material appears only in the text of a scenario, the Arkham-O-Pedia refers to it using a three-letter identifier for the scenario followed by a plus symbol and an approximate number of printed pages from the beginning of the scenario text.

The following three-identifiers are used:

- ALK = “A Little Knowledge” (Watts & Willis)
- HRW = “The Hills Rise Wild” (by Morrison & Willis)
- CON = “The Condemned” (Herber)
- DON = “Dead of Night” (Herber)
- TLP = “The Little People” (Herber)
- APS = “A Painted Smile” (Watts & Herber)
- TOY = “Trail of Yig” (Erik Herber & Keith Herber)

So, for example, the entry for Dr. Bancroft at St. Mary’s Hospital refers to the scenario code TLP+11. The relevant material can be found in the text of the scenario “The Little People” approximately 11 pages from the beginning of that scenario in its published format.

Clipping Identifiers

An often-overlooked source of information about Arkham and its residents is the prop newspaper included with Arkham Unveiled and H.P. Lovecraft’s Arkham. This multi-page in-game handout contains references to Arkham people and places described in the main sourcebook, as well as some additional minor details.

Describing the location of content in a multi-page, multi-column newspaper filled with various text articles and advertisements is not always simple. To make such references unambiguous we introduce a “clipping identifier” notation. Clipping Identifiers look like this: AUN-1-AB-2-Wireless. They are made up of several components, separated by hyphens.

- The first component of a Clipping Identifier simply records which document or prop the reference came from. All clippings that came from the Arkham Unveiled Newspaper, begin AUN.
- The second component of a Clipping Identifier records the page number on which the reference may be found within the prop.
- The third component of a Clipping Identifier records the column or columns on the prop page where the clipping may be found. The leftmost column is named “A”, the next column to the right is named “B”, and so on. Where a clipping covers more than one column, all of the columns that it spans are concatenated to form a multi-letter code. Thus, a page section that covers both column “A” and column “B” will be given a code of “AB” whereas a page section that only spans column “A” will be given a code of “A”.
- The fourth component of a Clipping Identifier records the sequence number (counted from the top of the page, downwards) where the clipping appears within the nominated column (or columns). Thus, a clipping that appears as the third item down a column will be given a number “3”.
- The fifth and final component of a Clipping Identifier is a short word (or words) that appears close to the top of the clipping. This is a cross-check.

Returning to the example Clipping Identifier mentioned above: AUN-1-AB-2-Wireless.

This would refer to a clipping in the Arkham Unveiled Newspaper (first component is “AUN”), on page 1 (second component). The clipping spans columns A and B (third component is “AB”) and is the second item in to appear from the top of those columns. The word “Wireless” appears somewhere close to the beginning of the clipping.
INDEX 1: ARKHAM PEOPLE

This index is an alphabetic listing of persons mentioned somewhere in Herber’s Arkham material (whether in the sourcebook, newspaper prop, or one of the “canonical” scenarios). In some cases references point to general non-sourcebook sections of the core Arkham book (e.g., “Brief History”).

Some additional information about the context in which the person is mentioned is also included (usually in square brackets after the name).

A small number of references which are entirely peripheral to Arkham (e.g., newspaper article describing Pope Pius meeting Mussolini) have been omitted.

Entries marked with an Asterisk and shown in italics are people unlikely to be found in 1920s Arkham. This may because they are historical personages, or are not local to the Arkham region.

INDEX 4: ARKHAM ADDRESSES

This index is an alphabetic listing of Arkham street addresses mentioned somewhere in Herber’s Arkham material (whether in the sourcebook, newspaper prop, or one of the “canonical” scenarios).

For convenience this index is broken into sub-listings for each of the nine Arkham neighborhoods. Within each listing, entries are sorted first by the name of the street (minus any N/S/E/W prefix). Multiple entries for a single street are then sorted by prefix and then lastly by street number.

Some additional information about the context in which the address is mentioned is also included (usually in square brackets after the address).

For further information about Arkham’s system of numbering addresses on streets in different parts of town, see the Appendix.

Neighborhoods of Arkham

Herber’s depiction of Arkham contains nine distinct neighborhoods.

The three neighborhoods north of the Miskatonic are (from west to east): Northside, Downtown, and East-Town. The boundaries of these suburbs are long N-S streets running through the entire northern section of the town.

- Northside is the region to the west of N. Garrison Street;
- Downtown is the region to the east of N. Garrison but west of Federal Street;
- East-Town is the region to the east of Federal Street.

The six neighborhoods south of the Miskatonic are loosely arranged in a 2 x 3 grid bounded by long N-S streets and long E-W streets. These neighborhoods can be thought of as three “pairs”: a pair of neighborhoods (Merchant and Rivertown) directly adjacent to the Miskatonic River; a pair of neighborhoods directly south of those (Campus and French Hill); and a pair of neighborhoods on the southern-most edge of town (Uptown and Lower Southside). The boundaries of these are:

- Merchant is bounded by: the river to the north, Church St to the south, and Peabody Ave to the east.
- Rivertown is bounded by: the river to the north, Church St to the south-west, and Peabody Ave to the west.
- Campus is bounded by: Church St to the north, Pickman St to the south, and S. Garrison St to the east.
- French Hill is bounded by: Church St to the north, Pickman St to the south and S. Garrison St to the west.
- Uptown is bounded by: Pickman St to the north and S. Garrison St to the east.
- Lower Southside (often just called Southside) is bounded by: Pickman St to the north and S. Garrison St to the west.

Errors in Arkham Unveiled

Herber's original source material is meticulous in its attention to maintaining internal consistency. There are however a handful of errors that slipped through the cracks:

- Trolley Station (AU224, HPLA224) on E. Armitage St has a street number, 404, that would normally be on South side of street, but maps show it on the North.
- Ahbury M. E. Church (AU206, HPLA208) on Marsh St has a street number, 640, that would normally be on East side of street but maps show it on the West side.
- "Prisoner in Attic" (AU303, HPLA301) on Noyes St has a street number, 753, that would normally be on West side of street, but maps show it on the East side.
- Courthouse (AU210, HPLA212) on N. Peabody St has street number, 666, that would normally be on East side (i.e., in Independence Square) but the courthouse is actually on the West side of street. It’s assumed that the number “666” exists for horror-novelty factor rather than strict accuracy.
- Orne’s Gangway (AU722, HPLA721) on S. French Hill St has a street number that is clearly wrong for the location shown on maps: the sourcebook entry suggest street number 780, but it would be more realistically given a number of 480.
- Eben Draper School (AU719, HPLA715) on S. Powder Mill St has street number, 373, that would normally be on East side of street, but maps show it on the West side.
- Trolley tracks of the French Hill Line are shown as travelling on Water Street for a block before joining the Peabody Avenue bridge across the Miskatonic. Unfortunately, in the large-scale town map, this street clearly passes under a bridge, making such a join-up impossible (unless a ramp or similar were to exist, which isn’t shown).
- Map of Neighborhoods and Trolley Routes (AU page 8) shows a different numbering scheme for E–W blocks. This map suggests a system where numbering (and E vs W) starts at Peabody rather than Garrison. Nowhere else in the book uses this convention, so presumably this is a carry-over from an earlier phase of the design which didn’t get corrected.

New Errors Introduced During Revision for H.P. Lovecraft’s Arkham

The process of revising the sourcebook for HPLA seems to have created a number of new problems as well as some arbitrary reassignments of addresses (possibly to make the maps work better). All of these divergences are noted below:

- Bartholemew Appleby IV (AU139, HPLA103) is included in the Northside section of the original AU with mention in the text of a house on Saltonstall (which only runs south of the river). The neighborhood maps in AU show a house on W. Derby. HPLA attempts to fix this by replacing the textual mention of Saltonstall and inventing a street address for this (100 W. Derby), however this number doesn't fit with the address numbering system in AU — the location shown on the map would suggest an even street number about half way along the 200 block instead (e.g., 250 W. Derby).

- Hardwicke’s Stamps & Coins: not an error as such, but address and location changes slightly between editions (moving from 562 Jenkin to 561 Jenkin). On the map, it also moves from one side of Jenkin street to the other.

- Dr Heinrich T. Muelhig: Location moved in HPLA (from 555 Marsh to 157 E. Curwen). Location shown on neighborhood map is on the correct side of the street, but probably is not on the 100 block; more likely an odd number close to 200.

- Dr Sinterwald: Location moved in HPLA (street address changed from 567 Marsh to 568 Marsh). On neighborhood map, new location is actually on the high 600 block, probably an odd number (perhaps 687 or similar).

- E. Parrington, Gunsmith moves number on W. Main (417 to 433 ½). The newspaper prop in the back of HPLA has not been updated to reflect this change which still includes the old address.

- Manelli’s Music Store moves number on W. Main (307 to 321 ½).

- Radio Center moves number on W. Main (197 to 205 ½).

- Walter’s Optics moves number on W. Main (131 to 185 ½).

- Hattie’s Boutique moves number on W. Church (from 422 to 388) as does Caselius’s Fine Jewelers (from 388 to 388 ½).

- Jaywil’s Book Store is not given a number in AU, but has one in HPLA — 224 W. Church. The University Shop changes street number from 224 W. Church to 224 ½ W. Church. This latter change hasn’t been reflected in the newspaper prop at the back of HPLA which still includes the old address.

- Taranowski’s Bakery moves number on E. Church (157 to 135 ½).

- Eleanor Peabody Charity Home is missing a street number in HPLA (probably a typo; in AU it is 174 S. Powder Mill).

- Dunham’s Brickyard is listed in HPLA text as being on Armitage Street which is obviously incorrect; the HPLA map still shows it on River Street, so it’s almost certainly a typo in the text.

- Campus Bicycle Shop is listed in the HPLA text as being on W. Church, but the map shows it on E. Church (which agrees with AU, so it’s likely a typo in the HPLA text). This error has been replicated in the newspaper prop in both AU and HPLA.

- College Barbershop moves number on S. Garrison (from 271 to 259 ½).

- OCR Errors: several entries in the HPLA text describing Uptown and Lower Southside neighborhoods are marred by bad OCR renditions which mis-read the digit “1” as “7”
  - First Presbyterian Church on W. Saltonstall (651 to 657)
  - Arkham Reserved Congregational Church on W. Washington (651 to 657)
  - Arkham Historical Society on S. Garrison (531 to 537)
  - Larkin Institute on E. Pickman (166 to 766 … which is obviously incorrect and doesn’t match map)
  - Miss Andrews Social Parlour on E. High (109 to 709 … which doesn’t match map)
INDEX 5: ARKHAM TELEPHONE NUMBERS

This index is a listing of all telephone numbers referred to in Herber’s Arkham material. The only place where telephone numbers appear is in the newspaper prop supplied with Arkham Unveiled and H.P. Lovecraft’s Arkham.

Entries are sorted by telephone number – all Arkham numbers have the same prefix (sometimes referred to as a “Misk”).

Some additional information about the context in which the number is mentioned is also included (usually in square brackets after the telephone number).

APPENDIX: ON ARKHAM’S SYSTEM OF STREET NUMBERING

One of the notable, yet frequently overlooked, aspects of Herber’s description of Arkham is its detailed and internally-consistent system of block and street numbering. The material which follows distils this information with the goal of making it easier to create “realistic” (i.e., internally-consistent) new Arkham Addresses.

Blocks and Numbers

As described in Herber’s original Arkham sourcebook material, the town has “recently adopted” a system of street numbering which divides the whole of town into a series of numbered blocks each of which has an allocation of 100 street numbers.

Blocks are numbered according to a grid that extends through the entire city, so all addresses on a block will be somewhat similar to the addresses of similarly-located lots on the blocks of streets that run parallel (e.g., the next street over). This means that some streets don’t begin at the 100-block, but at some higher number, just to allow for address numbers to line up with parallel streets (for example, Brown, Jenkin, and Gedney Streets are each short street which run three blocks N-S through Northside; the streets to the east and west of those streets have their 500 blocks lined up with the start of the shorter streets, hence Brown, Jenkin, and Gedney all start their addressing at the 500 block).

Not every address number on a block is used, and where a location is situated relative to the ends of the block will determine the address number it is allocated. For example, a location at the start of the 200 Block might attract an address number of 200 or 201 if it’s on the corner or 205 if nearby, while a location half way along the same block might be given an address number of 251. A location just prior to the same block ending at the next major intersection might be given an address number of 290.

The center-point for this system of block numbering is the intersection of Garrison Street and Main Street, just south of the river. This point is also used to define the dividing lines which split long-running streets into N/S sections or E/W sections. Generally:

- Long-running N–S streets which cross Main street will have two sections: a North section (everything north of Main; with block numbers increasing as one travels further north of Main) and a South section (everything south of Main; with block numbers increasing as one travels further south of Main);

- Long-running E–W streets which cross Garrison street will likewise have two sections: a West section (everything west of Garrison; with block numbers increasing as one travels further west of Garrison) and an East section (everything east of Garrison; with block numbers increasing as one travels further east of Garrison).

There are a few consequences of this system. One is that streets uniformly begin with the 100 block. This means the lowest address number on any street is 100 or 101 (depending on which side of the street). Thus, an address with a number below 100 (e.g., 67 Lich Street) is never valid in this numbering scheme. Another consequence is that where East and West sections of the same street join (or the North and South sections) there are two adjacent 100 blocks. Thus, for example 101 W. Main will be just across the street from 100 E. Main and there may be a 101 E. Main nearby as well.
Arkham uses a surprisingly-uniform system to decide which side of a street has all the odd numbers (with the other side of the street having all the even numbers). The system is derived from a single rule: when traveling as the numbers are ascending, even numbers occur on your right and odd numbers occur on your left. Because the numbering order depends on whether one is travelling on a North, South, East, or West section this leads to variations. To make it easier, the possibilities are enumerated below:

- The West Section of an E–W street: numbers increase as one travels West. Odd numbers are on the South side.
- The East Section of an E–W street: numbers increase as one travels East. Odd numbers are on the North side.
- The North Section of a N–S street: numbers increase as one travels North. Odd numbers are on the West side.
- The South Section of a N–S street: numbers increase as one travels South. Odd numbers are on the East side.

Where a street is not divided into a N & S section or E & W section, it typically uses the convention of other nearby streets. This usually means N–S streets in the northern half of town are numbered like North Sections, while N-S streets in the southern half are numbered like South Sections. Ditto for E–W streets in East or West halves of town.

This system is consistent but can get confusing where N and S sections (or E and W sections) meet, since the numbering switches sides. For example, if one starts on the 100-block of W. Main travelling east, the addresses will first be arranged with odd numbers on the south side of the street (decreasing as one approaches Garrison). The last address on the southern side before the end of the block (at Garrison St) would be 101 W. Main. The next block, just across Garrison will be the 100 block of E. Main. On this block, odd numbers will be on the north side of the street, not the south. Thus 101 E. Main will be on the north, diagonally-opposite where 101 W. Main was on the intersection.
